Dear Sir:

The piece you sent on is not a coin but is a medal. It was struck for the Centennial and was theofficial Centennial medal. It comes in both silver and copper. Coin dealers are very prone to call it the Centennial Dollar but without any reason or authority whatsoever. It is not rare and if I remember correctly auction records it brings anywhere from $1.50 to about $3.50. This piece being stained and showing a little wear on the breast is worth nearer the lower sum. I am returning it by insured parcel post.

Very truly yours,

HW:JG
